

Saturday's tour turned out better than expected. When we arrived at the Roger Cabana centre in St. Hippolyte we found it closed because their grooming equipment was unable to cope with the icy surfaces. So we drove back to the Gare de Piedmont to ski on the pulverized crust of the P'tit Train du Nord. It was a gorgeous sunny day, cold but not too bad and conditions were very fast, good for the basically boring train track bed. We headed north to Mt. Rolland station and on to the bridge over the Doncaster River, and then all the way back to Piedmont. We then went up the hill, a short trip to Marie-France and Brent's house for refreshments. A most satisfying day.
